

RUSSIANS ARE OUT OF HARBOR

Entire Squadron At Port Arthur Escape From Admiral Togo Late Yesterday.

WILL JOIN VLADISTOK FLEET NOW

Japanese Armies Are Advancing Steadily Towards Mukden. Using Chinese Railway Lines For Transportation.

(Special by Scripps-McLae.) London, Aug. 11.—The Central News dispatch from St. Petersburg says, "It is reported the Japanese advanced against the Russians left flank in the neighborhood of Liao Yang. Also the Japanese retired from some Southern positions. Apparently advance on Liao Yang has begun."

Arrives in Port
Chee Foo, Aug. 11.—The Russian torpedo destroyer which has reached here from Port Arthur to day is the Kichikich. The captain states the purpose of the sortie yesterday was to enable the warships to join the Vladivostok squadron which has been recruited by the purchase of ships from Argentina. The hospital ship Magnolia with women and children was accompanied by the Russian destroyer to this port.

War Expenses

Togo After Them
Shanghai, China, Aug. 11.—A report has just reached here from Chefoo that it has been announced from a Japanese source that all of the Russian fleet except a few torpedo boats has escaped from Port Arthur and that Admiral Togo is now in pursuit.

Strike Together
London, Aug. 11.—Realization that Japanese armies are preparing to strike simultaneously on Mukden and Liao yang, isolating Kuropatkin's whole army and cutting off his retreat or reinforcements, spreads fresh alarm through St. Petersburg military and official circles.

This knowledge came to the Russian capital with two dispatches. One from Mukden showed that the Japanese had taken possession of the Chinese railroad and were mobilizing troops at Shunlingting for an attack on Mukden.

The other dispatch came from Shunlingting, sixty-six miles east of Mukden, indicating that a strong Japanese force has been encountered only thirty-six miles southward.

By utilizing the Chinese railroad the Japanese can easily land an army at Yinkow and move it by rail to Shunlingting, far above Liao yang and directly west of Mukden. An army at Shunlingting would be in the valley north of the mountain range running southwest from Mukden, and would be able to strike the railroad at Thieling, forty miles north of Mukden.

Such a move would not only result in the isolation of Kuropatkin's en-the army and the cutting off of all supplies, but would prevent him from retreating or being reinforced.

The correspondent of the Reuter Telegram company with General Kuropatkin's force sends a dispatch via Fusan reporting a Russian attack on Kuropatkin's right. The dispatch is very disjointed. It reads as follows:

"Heavy firing on our right confirms the reports that a Russian large force is attacking there."

"Russian prisoners state that the Russian army is sometimes short of rations for two days at a time."

"The season of rain has been followed by a fortnight of severe heat."

"The Japanese losses up to August 10 were 900 killed and wounded."

The statement of losses evidently refers to Kuropatkin's army alone.

Hasten Troops
St. Petersburg, Aug. 11.—It is reported in military circles that Lieutenant General Libavich is marching with troops from the direction of Vladivostok to create a diversion in the rear of General Kuropatkin's army, with the object of relieving General Kuropatkin's force.

Fresh alarm spread through military and official circles when it was realized for the first time that Japanese armies may be able to strike Mukden by the time they are ready to attack Liao yang.

See the Ships
Chefoo, Aug. 11.—Sixteen Russian ships were sighted off here.

Another Story
London, Aug. 11.—A dispatch from Tokio announces definitely the Japanese have frustrated the attempt of the Port Arthur squadron to escape.

Wants Peace

Sink a Jap Vessel
Chefoo, Aug. 11.—A report is current this afternoon that the Japanese cruiser Kasagi was sunk in a naval battle following the arrival of the Russian fleet from Port Arthur. Three Japanese torpedo boat destroyers are outside Chefoo harbor watching for the Russian destroyer which arrived today from Port Arthur.

Russian Defeat
St. Petersburg, Aug. 11.—A report is circulated here that the Kuropatkin forces have suffered serious reverses. The details are being withheld from the public.

Then it disappeared, and was reported to have been broken by a careless servant.

As to Proper Marrying Age.

PARISIAN THIEVES ROB CONSUL GOWDY'S OFFICE

Take Petty Cash and Postage Stamps, but Fail to Get Five Thousand Dollars in the Safe.

Paris, Aug. 11.—Consul General Gowdy on arriving at the American consulate Wednesday found that his private desk had been forced, the woodwork badly smashed, petty cash and postage stamps amounting to several hundred francs abstracted, and his papers ransacked.

The big safe of the consulate bore conspicuous traces of unsuccessful attempts to force it open. The safe contained a large sum in cash and important documents. The police are making the fullest investigations.

The consulate occupied a handsome suite of rooms on the third floor of No. 35 Avenue de l'Opera, one of the finest streets in Paris. The building is devoted to offices, nobody except the janitor residing there. The burglars gave their entire attention to Mr. Gowdy's private office, in which are a large desk and a strong safe. The former was partly wrecked, the drawers being forced, the woodwork splintered, the papers turned out, and letters even being dragged out of their envelopes. Luckily none of the drawers containing anything valuable were carried off.

The safe bore numerous traces of violent efforts to force it open with wedges, which, however, proved futile. The burglars also attacked the hinges with a hammer, and the lock also showed hammer marks.

Mr. Gowdy cannot understand how the noise was not heard by the janitor. The safe contained about $5,000, besides important documents.

The body of O. G. Caseling, aged 50, was discovered hanging in a building a few miles north of the town of Norway, Racine county. It is said that he formerly lived in Milwaukee and was once well off. Discouragement is supposed to have led him to take his life.

DEADLY DUELLO IN MADISON PARK

Two Italians Have Their Little Fight Out With Probable Fatal Results.

(Special to The Gazette.) Madison, Wis., Aug. 11.—A bitter quarrel between Angelo Lebellia, alias Frank Kieley, and Ignazio Capo, two Italians, culminated in a shooting affray here last night. The two had been good friends but when Capo accused Lebellia of stealing the friendship ceased. The latter was greatly agitated over the accusation and watched for his intended victim in the capital park. When Capo returned home from work Lebellia sprang upon him, after a few heated words had been exchanged, he drew a revolver, discharging the gun four times in succession. Two of the shots took effect, one hitting, entering the left hip and the other the left thigh. The assailant tried to escape on a bicycle but was captured by a posse of citizens before he got far. Both men are married.

Chicago, Aug. 11.—The strike situation took on a more peaceful appearance this morning.

Years for Intimidation

In fact, the drivers insisted that a large force of pickets should be sent out, as they were quite anxious to be "intimidated" so that they would not technically violate their agreements.

While the retail dealers and labor representatives were in conference in the offices of the Market Wagon Drivers' Union in the Real Estate Board building the packers were holding a conference in the offices of Swift & Co. at 240 La Salle street. At this conference were J. Ogden Armour, Louis F. Swift, Edward Tilden, E. A. Cudahy, Thomas J. Connors, and J. E. Maurer.

They refused to say what their attitude might be, saying that they knew of no peace move and would meet that issue when it came up to them.

MRS. KRAUSS INNOCENT OF MURDERING MOTHER

Public Prosecutor Is Satisfied the Woman Is in No Way Connected With Mysterious Deaths.

Hartford City, Ind., Aug. 11.—Mrs. Rae Anderson Krauss was not implicated in any way in the death of her mother nor of Matt Collins of this city. This has been proved.

Public Prosecutor Burns has been gathering all possible evidence regarding Mrs. Krauss' past. He has received proofs regarding Mrs. Sarah Anderson's death in a Cincinnati hospital, which preclude her daughter having anything to do with it.

He also received a report on Collins' death from Dr. W. N. Cronin of this city. Dr. Cronin performed the autopsy and declares Collins died of fatty degeneration of the heart.

In Mrs. Krauss' cell are a Bible and a picture of Crystal Krauss, her stepdaughter, whom she is accused of murdering. Her husband visited her and found her lost in thought over the picture of his dead daughter. She did not notice his presence until he was within the cell and when she looked up there were tears in her eyes. She said: "I wish I were where Crystal is and Crystal were alive." She then buried her face in her hands and wept.

Department of Agriculture

While it is universally admitted that the administration of the Department of Agriculture is probably the most effective in the world, it is interesting to note that this service costs the nation far less than that of other countries. A German paper states that Russia expends annually for this purpose as much as the United States and France, Austria and Hungary about $8,500,000 each, while America spends but $6,000,000.

The World as We Look at It

Losses Reason, but Not Wealth

Some years ago a very wealthy man in England got it into his head that he had lost all his money. Coming Attractions.

With plenty of fun in it, capable artists and a crowd of pretty girls, you have the main elements that make for success these days, in the field of musical comedy. All of these and more are claimed as the chief characteristics of the new production of "A Girl from Dixie," which, under the direction of Sam S. Shubert will be seen at the Grand opera house, Friday, Aug. 19. This newest endeavor in the field of musical comedy is the work of Harry H. Smith, author of "Robin Hood," etc. The English method of having several composers contribute their efforts to a production has been followed in this instance, and the following representative list of musicians have furnished the various numbers, each written in characteristic style, so that the widest variety is afforded music lovers: Victor Herbert, Ludwig Engländer, Halstead Shome, Connel and Johnson, Max Witt, Ben Jerome, Wm. E. Rock, Will Marion Cook, Henry Waller and Manuel Klein.

Well Done.—We understand that Mr. E. H. Mr. Benham is one of our first and finest young men, and we hope our citizens will rally around him and help him fill a company. He enters the service from patriotic motives alone and at a considerable sacrifice of personal interests. If there are young men proposing to enlist they cannot find better associates.

VERDICT OF THE PARTY

From the report of the committee on Credentials to the REPUBLICAN NATIONAL CONVENTION, which was unanimously adopted by that convention, June 22, 1904.

Your committee report it to be their final judgment that the convention which elected John C. Spooner, J. V. Quarles, J. W. Babcock and E. M. Branch as delegates at large, and their alternates at large, to this convention from the state of Wisconsin WAS THE REGULAR CONVENTION OF THE REPUBLICAN PARTY IN WISCONSIN, and that the delegates elected by it are the regular elected delegates at large from the state of Wisconsin to the republican convention, and, as such, are entitled to seats in this convention.

PACKERS' STRIKE AND MONEY MARKET.

A Chicago dispatch stating that the packing house strike is resulting in an accumulation of money in the Chicago banks does not exaggerate this feature of the strike. There is probably no other single industry in the United States that has a more immediate influence on the money market than the meat packing industry. The widespread ramifications of the meat trust are not generally appreciated.

The great houses forming the meat packing combination are among the largest depositors and borrowers of the banks of the United States. The Chicago estimate that the outstanding loans of these houses aggregate nearly $100,000,000 is, probably, not an over-estimate. The packers have an elaborate system of conducting the financial operations necessary for the transaction of their enormous business. This department is under the management of an experienced financier. The different houses make deposits in hundreds, it is probably within the mark to say, thousands, of banks throughout the United States. These deposits, individually small, in the aggregate amount to an immense sum. Each deposit is made with a distinct understanding that the firm shall have a right to borrow a corresponding amount of money. The fore, distributed broadcast through notes of the meat packers are, there many of the states of the country, and form part of the assets of thousands of the city and country banks. In addition to all this the packers are among the principal customers of the Chicago banks and, moreover, sell a large amount of their paper in the New York market. Inasmuch as meat goes into almost immediate consumption there is hardly any other commodity which equals it as the basis of a bank loan. The meat packers are able to float this immense amount of paper, and to carry this immense sum of indebtedness, because it is known that whenever they shut down, the quick sale of their product would be able to pay off immediately the great bulk of what they owed.

It is needless to say that this system of widely distributing their indebtedness throughout hundreds and thousands of banks throughout the country is one of the elements of the strength of the meat trust. As one banker says of it, "such a combination could hardly fail, because the banks which are its creditors could not afford to permit it to fail." In any contest which may be waged against the meat trust on the ground that it is an oppressive monopoly, this fact must be taken into consideration as one of the things on which the packers will rely for their security.

From this statement it is easy to understand how immediate and far-reaching is the effect upon the money situation of the strike in the packing industry. Its effect is to reduce at once the amount of loans which the packers require in order to carry on their business. This throws back upon the banks a large sum of money which would otherwise be employed in this industry. At a time when the money market has a glut of loanable money, this fact tends to confirm the low rates of loans by increasing the supply and diminishing the demand for credit. Unless the strike comes to an end speedily or the packers are able to resume full operations by employing non-union men, this condition, by increasing the supplies of the Chicago banks, may materially reduce the western demand upon New York for moving the crops.

AN APPEAL TO THE RECORD.

The history of financial legislation in America can be summarized into the very brief statement that the Republicans have advocated and the Democrats opposed every act of legislation calculated to perfect the system which now obtains. The consensus of mature republican judgment has been right. The consensus of opinion of the democratic party has been wrong, usually. The republican party has made mistakes and rectified them. The democratic party has made mistakes and insisted upon repeating them.

The national banking act was a republican measure, calculated to redeem the country from the evils of wildcat banking. The measure was opposed by 90 per cent. of the democrats in congress and is today opposed by a very large number of them, in spite of the time test of its merits. In 1896 the democratic platform declared the issue of national bank notes unconstitutional and so recently as 1900 the platform demanded the substitution of government notes or silver certificates for bank notes as rapidly as possible.

Every republican in congress voted for the resumption of specie payment and every democrat against it; and a democratic house, in 1877, passed a bill for the repeal of the resumption act. A majority of the democrats voted against the bill to repeal the silver purchase act, and only 12 democrats voted for the establishment of the gold standard, while 178 voted against it. The republicans in 1896 and 1900 and 1904 declared for the gold standard, in their party platforms. The democrats declared for the free and unlimited coinage of silver in 1896 and in 1900, and remained silent on the subject in their platform of 1904.

That in brief, is the record and yet the democratic party comes up and asks the voters of the country to entrust the destinies of the nation to its unsafe hands and its uncertain policies on a question that concerns the welfare of every American. It is like asking the owners of a vessel, freighted with valuable cargo, steaming strong in a known current with a trained pilot, to surrender it to an unskilled pilot and an untried crew.

The largest item in our gain of gold import last year came from Japan's purchases in this country. The republican party insists upon the open door for American trade. The democratic policy would make the open door useless by tinkering with the tariff and keeping us out of foreign markets.

There is nothing involved in the tariff problem, as democrats would have the voters believe. The nub of the proposition is that whenever the protection is removed from an American industry the employment incident to that industry is simply transferred from American workmen to foreign workmen.

The plth of President Roosevelt's speech of acceptance is found in the sentence: "We know our own minds and have kept of the same mind a sufficient length of time to give our policy coherence and sanity." There is no answer to that statement.

"Our policy is continuous," said President Roosevelt in his speech of acceptance. The democrats follow the plan of the vaudeville managers and present a new policy at each appearance.

Mr. John Sharp Williams says he does not know whether the democratic double standard notion "is a corpse or in a trance." It is a corpse in the East but very much alive in the West, and some sections of the south.

The democratic platform of 1900 said: "We are unalterably opposed to monometallism." That declaration has not been changed by the action of the party in national convention.

It required a display of moral courage for a democrat to declare for sound money in 1896 and 1900. Judge Parker supported the free silver candidate in these years.

Vice Presidential Candidate Davis is much incensed over the campaign stories that are being told about him. He loses timidity of that kind when he gets older and more seasoned to the penalties of political life.

Democratic orators are insisting that Senator Lodge wrote the republican platform. The republican platform was written in the records of eight years of glorious party achievement.

Candidates should be judged by the platforms upon which they stand and not by their personal views upon questions which concern the people.

No republican convention has ever found it necessary to revise its platform to comply with a telegram of instructions.

Speaker Cannon says the republican motto is "We move on," and he might have added that the democratic motto is "We follow."

Justice for labor and capital is a corner stone of republicanism.

PRESS COMMENT

Milwaukee Sentinel: Money judiciously expended will restore the statehouse to a respectable state of repair, but the administration sheltered under this roof never can be repaired.

El Paso Herald: From handing out mysterious railway-counter pieces to distributing democratic tickets is not such a change for Tom Taggart.

Superior Telegram: The juror who allows the lawyers eloquence to outweigh the evidence is the man who is encouraging crime in this country.

Atchison Globe: A case of beer being carried into a private house in Topeka creates as much "talk" as a married man out buggy riding with a grass widow.

Oshkosh Northwestern: Untimely frosts are said to have done much damage to the cranberry crop this week. Possibly our Thanksgiving turkey will have to go without the usual trimmings.

Neenah Record: The Madison Journal calls attention to the fact that crime is increasing in this state. And when we notice a few glaring official examples we don't wonder.

Racine Journal: It is officially stated the rural mail carriers will not be required to wear special uniforms. But it is coming later on as a matter of propriety and for the good of the service.

Hudson Star-Times: The Republican platform speaks glowingly of the past and promises an optimistic future. The democratic platform is one of prophetic pessimism, with nothing to spur endeavor, inspire hope or encourage loyalty.

Scranton Tribune: It has been announced that General Kuroki's father was a freemason, but since he was walloped the Russians so persistently the authorities have about concluded that the elder Kuroki must have been a Pole.

Cincinnati Commercial Tribune: It is due to Mr. Bryan to say that it is not he, but The Commoner devil who inserts the "applause" and the "long-continued applause" in the reports of the Bryan speeches at St. Louis now running as an annual in the Commoner.

Merrill Advocate: A gentleman visiting Milwaukee utters grievous lamentations over the fact that more than 20,000 women are earning their living in Milwaukee instead of marrying and caring for children. He says its very serious and wants to know why it is. She's tired, my dear sir, of asking for money.

Appleton Crescent: On one of its streets Oshkosh has tried for macadam but made the mistake in using limestone instead of granite for the top dressing. Hereafter the hours of public works says it will use only granite. The granite chips can be purchased in Berlin, where there are five quarries, and shipped by all water route to any towns on the Fox or Wolf rivers.

Madison Journal: The editor of a country paper not a great many miles from Madison who inserted the following item in last week's edition is evidently not desirous of retaining his advertisers on his list, although he says they mean much to him. This is what he says:

"The publisher feels constrained to apologize for the large amount of advertising matter in this issue, but as it is the silver lining to the newspaper man's cloud, and coming, too, in dog-days, we trust the same will be fully overlooked by an indulgent public."

Chicago Chronicle: Not everyone can have an automobile, for, after all, an automobile is nothing but an automobile and the owner must have a hundred luxuries besides, but get a houseboat and you have a house, a carriage and a floating palace commodious enough for the whole family and their friends. It can be luxurious or simple, rustic and picturesque or grand and showy, according to your purse or taste. None of the fads of the present time can compare with the houseboat. It offers change of scene without the exertion of change of base. It gives you ample room without and within. It can be enjoyed by the youngest child or the feeblest old man. It is quieting in its effects and yet can give you all the variety desired. It waits your convenience and moves as you choose. It has all the privileges of the camp without the limitations of the tent. There is no perplexity about luggage and the farder can be frequently replenished. The expenses of a family at a good summer resort increase each year as luxuries increase and the routine there is apt to be monotonous after a short time. The novelty of a houseboat ought to tempt one to try it and once tried it is pretty certain the experiment will be repeated.

HORSE THIEF IN TOILS AGAIN

CHAS. AUGRELLAS IS CAPTURED IN ILLINOIS.

TERRORIZED ROCK CO. IN 1901

And Was Finally Run Down and Sent to Prison by Wallace Cochrane
—Eighty-three Years Old.

Deputy Sheriff Wallace Cochrane today received word from Sheriff Gardner that he had captured the man suspected of stealing a roan horse, buggy, and harness, from a farmer in Green county on August 1, and had recovered the stolen property. The supposed criminal turns out to be none other than the octogenarian horse-thief Officer Cochrane captured after a long hunt in November, 1901, and who was afterwards convicted and sent to Waupun for a year and nine months.

Eighty-three Years Old
For over forty years Charles J. W. Augrellas—for that is his name—has been pursuing his dangerous calling, serving frequent terms in prison but always renewing his depredations soon after he was set free. He is now eighty-three years old and indications are that his recent sojourn in the penitentiary has not overcome his old habit. It is apparent that old age, while not impairing his activity has dulled his wit to a certain extent. Otherwise he would not again have operated so near the old stumping ground.

Terrorized the County
In 1901 a series of hold ups in the towns of Plymouth, Newark, and Avon, set the whole county agog. In no less than seven instances horses and rigs mysteriously disappeared and no clue to the identity of the marauder could be discovered. Wallace Cochrane, then deputy sheriff, started out on a long hunt and after several weeks ran the thief down in Illinois. On threats to prosecute him on more than one charge unless he acquiesced, Augrellas was brought to this state without a requisition. The whole story of how he had made his headquarters at Blue Creek, Ill., making periodical raids from this base into Wisconsin and returning with his plunder to dispose of it later to unsuspecting Illinois farmers, came out in the trial.

Gave Sheriff an Idea
The recent theft in Green county, following closely on the sale of a horse stolen from Madison to Tarrant & Kemmerer in this city, aroused a lingering suspicion to Sheriff Cochrane's mind. He communicated that suspicion to Sheriff Gardner and the latter started out in the identical trail which the Janesville officer had followed three years before. He found the stolen property in northern Illinois, as had been predicted, and ran down the supposed thief in Ogle county where he is safely resting behind the bars. This time Augrellas refused to come without a requisition. This will be secured in a few days and the prisoner will be brought here on his way to Green county in order that Messrs. Tarrant & Kemmerer may have a look at him. In 1888 and 1889 this man operated in Dane county and was sent up for four years. Twenty-five or thirty years previous he is said to have conducted an extensive business in the same line in Sauk county.

MILTON LADY HAD AWFUL EXPERIENCE

Mrs. W. M. Powell and Four Children
While Driving Yesterday Were Struck by Train.

Mrs. W. M. Powell and four children of Milton had a terrible experience which nearly cost them their lives yesterday. A freight train had passed the St. Paul crossing and not hearing the shouts of the brakeman who was manipulating a switch, they started to drive over the track, just as the train, on the rebound from its sound stop, began to move backwards. The vehicle was struck by the rear end and Mrs. Powell was thrown under it. Two of the children landed on the track and the other two cleared it. The switchman ran to the rescue. He got the two children off the track and in some manner managed to drag Mrs. Powell out from under the buggy as with it she was being shoved along the rails. When the train was brought to a stop there was no spoke remaining in the wheels and the whole rig, in fact, had been completely wrecked. The horse had broken away and had run on for some distance. Neither mother nor children were hurt. Not until he reached Edgerton did the brakeman discover that something had plucked his leg and that his shoe was filled with blood.

NEW FACTORY IN THE SOUTH END

CEMENT BRICK FACTORY COM-ING TO SPRING BROOK

MILWAUKEE CAPITAL INVESTED

Will Build Large Buildings And Employ A Large Force Of Men.
Ready Next Spring.

Added to its many industries existing at present Janesville is to have a new brickyard. Milwaukee parties have just completed a deal whereby they secure possession of excellent property in Spring Brook where they will erect a suitable building for the manufacture of their special kind of cement bricks. Offices will be established in Milwaukee and Chicago, but the headquarters of the company will be in Janesville and Janesville cement bricks will go from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

Large Concern
Rev. Father Goebel of St. Mary's church has been instrumental in bringing the new industry here and is authority for the fact that the owners are responsible business men who have plenty of money to operate with and will not ask a bonus of any kind to locate in Janesville. The natural sand beds found in Spring Brook are probably responsible for the locating of the factory in Janesville, together with the persuasion of Father Goebel.

Cement Brick
The new company will manufacture a new kind of pressed cement brick, both ornamental and plain, and in all colors. They will employ a large number of men and will have permanent buildings. Work on these structures will begin this fall and the company will be ready to begin actual work of manufacture in the spring.

READY TO BUILD COURT ST. BRIDGE

Foreman Clark from the Milwaukee
Iron Works and Small Crew
Arrived This Morning.

Bridge Foreman Clark of the Wisconsin Bridge & Iron Co., accompanied by two men, arrived from Milwaukee this morning to start the work on the new Court street structure. The shop work at the foundries in the Cream city is practically completed and the material is being loaded for shipment. The cement is on hand and the big tubes which are to support the bridge are expected in a day or two along with the pile driver which will be used in anchoring the timbers firmly in the river bottom. The big tubes will be fitted over the piles, with a filling of cement. Under the contract with the city the bridge must be completed by October 1. In order to fulfill it some fast work will have to be done.

PREFERRED WATER TO OFFICER BROWN

Tramp Pursued And Cornered On River Bank Yesterday Plunged Into The Stream.

It was a case of preferring the clear sparkling water of the Rock to the company of Officer Brown. A tramp pursued by the official from the North-Western railroad "dumps" and cornered on a little peninsula of land near the woolen mills yesterday, chose the former alternative. Officer Brown was so sure of his game that he never reckoned on this possibility and he was stupefied with amazement when the tramp plunged into the river and swam to the opposite shore. "They are all professionals—these fellows we see nowadays," he said this morning. "No workmen in search of jobs are on the road this time of the year."

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS BUSINESS SUCCESS

Twenty-five years of successful business in Janesville is just rounding to a close for Archie Reid. His success has been a source of gratification to his many friends and the best wishes of his competitors as well as his customers will attend him as he enters upon the second epoch of his career.

MANAGER MYERS MUCH GRATIFIED

Subscription List For The Girl From Dixie Is Growing Each Day.

"From present indications the list will reach thirty-six feet and two inches," said Manager Myers this morning as he exhibited the subscription list for the opening attraction of the Myers Grand on the 19th. Everyone seems to appreciate the efforts of Manager Myers to open his newly decorated playhouse for the coming season with the best attraction possible and music lovers are more than anxious to hear "A Girl from Dixie" and judge for themselves if the press notices it has received are really true. The following clipping is taken from the Dramatic Mirror of June 18, dated at St. Paul, where this company was then playing:

The musical comedy, "A Girl from Dixie," was produced at the Metropolitan opera house 24 by a strong and capable company. The production proved a 4 lightful entertainment, and was thoroughly enjoyed by large and appreciative audiences. Musically "A Girl from Dixie" is more satisfying than many creations of its class. The production is enhanced by a combination of pretty girls with unusual voices with dialogue and catchy songs. The prominence of the well trained and tunefully voiced chorus throughout was one of the chief attractions. The applause was hearty and the encores numerous. The principal female role, Kitty Calvert, was assumed by Beatrice Bronte. She sang and acted the title-role with vivacity and charm. Her powerful soprano voice was heard to fine effect. Clifford Leigh, as Lord Dunmore, contributed a very amusing and taking characterization of an English lord. D. L. Don won marked favor in the role of an eccentric music teacher. His dialect is antique, and his manner convulsed the audience. Charles K. French was excellent as Jack Randolph. Charles H. Bowers, as Edward Brandon, displayed a splendid voice in his song "The Lovers A B C," one of the finest musical numbers. Thomas J. Keogh, as Squire Mink, gave a laughable performance of a ranting lawyer. Charles H. Shaffer was distinctly good as old Mammy Maria Louise. Charles Bentley did good work as Nick Calvert. Essie Lyons, as Bess Jackson; Olga May, as Maude Mabel Earl; Victor Gate, as Miss Flint, rendered their roles in a charming manner, both in voice and action, that won for them merited recognition. A number of clever specialties took well, notably those of D. L. Don at the piano and the musical trio "Happy Days in Dixie."

Janesville horses and Rock county cattle will be the prize exhibits of the Imperial stock farm of Japan if the present plans of Touji Hashimoto and S. Ichii, representing the Imperial government of Japan, are carried out. These two gentlemen spent some days in Janesville last week and then went to Beloit and thence to Madison. According to a Madison dispatch they purchased horses at the Gallatin stables here and pigs at the Lavey farm, near Beloit, and some fine cattle near Oregon and Madison. These choice lots of Wisconsin live stock will be shipped to New York and thence to Tokio and will grace the Imperial stock farm unless one of the fast Russian cruisers takes into its head to stop the vessel they are on and divert their use to that of feeding some hungry Russian soldier. According to orders received by freight agents, however, the Japanese may have some difficulty in taking the cattle out of the country.

These orders prohibit the receiving of freight intended for shipment to the countries involved in the eastern war. The points mentioned as being included in the prohibitive orders are Japan, Manchuria, Korea, Siberia and New Chwang, China. The order does not affect shipments to Shanghai, Hong Kong and Manila. The order is issued by the freight department of the North-Western road acting on advice from the offices of the various steamship companies running lines from Portland and San Francisco. These companies have evidently become alarmed over the recent seizure of vessels bearing cargoes bound for Russia, and have decided not to take the risk of carrying such cargoes.

An agent for one of the roads said today that if the Japs wanted to take the live stock they had bought here to their home country the best they could do would be to send it to Hong Kong and then take their chance of getting it across to Japan.

DATE CHANGED AT THE STATE FAIR

Imperial Band Will Play At Milwaukee
On September 7th Instead of 9th.

It will be Wednesday, September 7, instead of Friday, September 9, that the Imperial band plays at the state fair at Milwaukee. This is even added dignity as Wednesday is state day and the day that Dan Patch will try to lower his world's record. The governor will also speak on this day and thousands will go from all parts of the state. Excursions will be run from Janesville on that day and present indications point to a large attendance of lower city residents. E. A. Hartman, who has charge of the publicity of the fair on the hill, was in the city this morning and extended the starting of the fair even more than Grant Fisher did yesterday. If the promises made are all kept it will be a great exhibition never before seen in the state.

CHAPTER XXII.

THE next morning, after breakfast, Mrs. Hilmyer called her husband aside. He followed her into the parlor, where she led him to get beyond the hearing of the negroes in the dining room.

"What's the matter with George?" she asked him.

"Why, nothing as I know of," he replied. "I haven't seen him this morning. Is anything wrong?"

"Looks like he hasn't slept a wink all night," said the woman. "He didn't touch a thing on the table, and his hands shook awful. Do you know, somehow, I believe him an' Governor Telfare quarreled up at Cranston's last night. I never saw him look like that before. He's up in the company bedroom. I passed through the hall just now an' see 'im settin' at the window lookin' out. Mr. Hilmyer, go up an' see what's the matter with 'im. He'll talk to you."

With his heart in his mouth, Hilmyer went up the stairs, sliding his hand on the banister railing. George turned his head as he entered the open door, and rose quickly, as if ashamed to be seen there without a reason for it.

"George, what's the matter with you? Ain't you well this mornin'?" the old man questioned gently.

"Not very, Mr. Hilmyer," George said, dropping his eyes, "but I'll feel better when I get to work. I'm going down pretty soon."

"That ain't it, my boy—that ain't it," said Hilmyer, his sympathetic eyes resting on the troubled face before him. "Some'n's got some wrong, George, an' I wish you'd tell me about it. I'd take it as a favor—would it, 1-2-3—feel a big interest in you. I don't know as I could ever explain how big it is. Tell me, George."

"It wouldn't do any good," the young man replied slowly, "and might disturb you a little—you are so kind hearted."

"I want to know, George."

"Well, I will tell you, Mr. Hilmyer. Do you know what is the hardest thing on earth to bear? It is to be insulted, grossly insulted, by a man whom you can't strike." Buckley then told all that had taken place between him and Telfare.

"He said that to you?" cried the old man. "Yes, I know what it would mean to a proud spirit like you'n. My boy, an' it's simply awful—awful! He's a cowardly dog, but that don't make you feel any better. Men in the northern states don't understand how we feel as we do on that line, but it's bred in the bone with us."

Hilmyer suddenly turned from the room and went downstairs. His wife heard him going out at the gate and called to him from the veranda, but he walked on without heeding her. At the street corner he quickened his step, going faster and faster till he reached the warehouse. He saw Keimer and Hanks in the office, but he passed on to George's room in the rear. There on the table lay Buckley's revolver. Throwing it into the pocket of his short coat he hurried out at the side door and went up the railroad to the Johnston House. Going into the office he approached the desk and asked the clerk for Governor Telfare.

"He left on the 8 o'clock train this morning, Mr. Hilmyer," said the clerk. "He had us call him at 7."

"Gone?" The old man stared blankly.

"Yes, he got off, but he'll be back next Sunday. He engaged the best room in the house and gave orders that it was not to be used by any one else."

"Gone?" Hilmyer turned and started away aimlessly. In the hall leading to the street he was met by Isaacson Truitt, who stopped him.

"Say, old man, what's the matter? Sick?" Hilmyer stared at him, but made no reply. "Look y' here, what ails you anyway?" The old soldier placed his hand on the merchant's shoulder and turned him into a vacant room on the side of the hall, a room used by commercial travelers for displaying their wares to the village storekeepers. Hilmyer sank into a chair and groaned. Truitt heard some one passing in the hall and closed the door.

"I know some'n's wrong," he said. "Some'n's wrong when a dancin' in the church an' a man o' yore stamp goes round white as a grave rock with a 44 caliber gun in his pocket an' his teeth chatterin' on as warm a day as this is."

Hilmyer told him what had happened to George and his own failure to meet Telfare. He told it in an unsteady voice, his lips quivering as he spoke. Then, with his head down, he added: "Bas, you know I split human blood thirty year ago. I've prayed all them years to get God to blot out the crime, an' yet, after all, if I'd a met Telfare just now, 1-2-3, reckon, or he hadn't apologized to that pore boy I'd a shot 'im dead in his tracks. I was all upset about it. Oh, my God, I'm as bad as I was away back when I was young an' hot blooded."

Truitt shrugged his shoulders. "Then I reckon it's better for all concerned that Telfare went off when he did. Now, look here, old man," Truitt bent and took the revolver from Hilmyer and put it into his own pocket. "You're entirely untrained to run round with a loaded gun in yore pocket. You take my advice an' go back to yore store. I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll study over this an' try to come to some conclusion what's best, then I'll come down an' see you. I'm interested in George Buckley, an' don't you let that slide out o' yore mind in yore excitement. He's been a friend true an' tried to me an' mine, an' I'll stand to 'im or die. Now, you go on to the warehouse."

"And when will you be down?" asked the merchant.

"Just as soon as I can see some way out o' the difficulty," said Truitt earnestly. "I tell you, you are too excitable—you go off half cooked. That's what got you in the trouble that you say has worried you so much. Why, even if you had shot the scoundrel just now, you'd a done it too quick to have any fun watchin' 'im squirm. I'd rather see a dern coward that's wronged me or mine beg for life 'an to see 'im die. We all die—that's common as pig tracks in wet weather, but only the dirty, sneakin' cowards is afraid of it. You go on now; we are a-doin' time. I'll come down—I'll come down! I ain't no anarchist, gold round killin' big men in office, but that feller's got to be tended to, an' I'll study up some'n'."

When Hilmyer had gone back down the railroad to the warehouse Truitt sauntered into the hotel office. "What time does the next train go to Atlanta?" he asked.

"There's another on the Southern in ten minutes," answered the clerk.

CHAPTER XXIII.

WHEN Truitt arrived in the great, bustling passenger depot in Atlanta it was noon. He elbowed his way through the throng of the waiting mass of human beings to the street. A dozen cabmen yelled at him and gestulated with their whips, but he paid no heed to them. Seeing a blue coated policeman on a corner, he approached him.

"Could you tell a feller if he'd be apt to see the governor at the statehouse this time o' day?" he asked.

"No; I reckon he's out at the mansion about now," replied the officer. "It's dinner time."

"Well, I'll go out thar, then," Truitt said and turned away. It was a twenty minutes' walk through the business portion of the city to the executive mansion on Peachtree street, near the best known and oldest clubhouse in the city. The building was a modern red brick structure standing back from the street on a well kept lawn, and as the gaunt mountaineer entered the iron gate and proceeded up the walk he saw a uniformed negro manservant at the door.

"I want to see Governor Telfare," Truitt said. "Is he about?"

"Yes, he's at home," the dapper negro replied, eying Truitt from head to foot with a contemptuous glance, "but he don't see nobody this time o' day."

"Oh, that's it?" And, to the evident surprise of the servant, the mountaineer, without removing his broad brimmed slouch hat, passed by him into the hall. "Well, you tell 'im thar's a feller out here that wants to see 'im, an' that dern quick."

"But I told you—"

"What you told me told me, you black idiot! You tell 'im what I told you, an' be in a hurry about it!"

With the whistles of his rolling eyes decidedly in evidence the negro backed out of the hall mumbling something Truitt could not catch. He came back in a minute.

"The governor says he's occupied just now an' ain't at home to nobody. He was just lyin' down to take a nap. He won't let nobody disturb 'im at this time o' day."

"He won't, hey?" Truitt sneered. "Well, you tell 'im I said a man wants to see 'im that kin bent the hind sights off 'im in the next election if he wants to. You tell 'im that a man wants to see 'im on a matter o' life an' death. Tell 'im that you black fool, an' see what he'll say."

The negro was absent about three minutes, and then he came back and suddenly motioned Truitt to enter the door on the right of the hall. Telfare was standing at a green covered writing table and frowned and stared impatiently at Truitt, who had not yet removed his hat.

"I believe I do not recall your face," he said, extending his hand, "but I meet so many friends in going about over the state. You are Mr.?"

"Oh, about as common, thank you—a little headache, that's all. How do you come on?"

"I'm very well, thank you, but I did not catch your name."

"Oh, my name? It's Isaacson Truitt."

"Well, Mr. Truitt, to be plain, you must know that I'm a very busy man, and if you will tell me right out what you called to see me about I'll see if we can get around to it. My private secretary usually needs visitors and makes a note of what they wish, but he is always out at lunch at this hour."

Truitt laughed. "Taking a ping of tobacco from his pocket, he tore off a piece and put it between his teeth. 'Lord bless yore soul,' he said, 'no private secretary couldn't tend to this job for you.'"

"I don't understand you," Telfare was waxing impatient; his frown had deepened on his dark brow.

"Well, it's jest this way, governor," Truitt replied. "It seems that as much as you want to please yore constituents you've made one o' 'em up at Darley as mad as thunder at you."

"To whom do you refer?" Telfare was staring blankly.

"Why, I to whom? To a young feller—to George Buckley, who, it seems, you made sorter mad 'out'er night over at old man Cranston's house."

"And he has sent you to me?" enquired Telfare.

"No; he never mentioned it to me. But it seems—at least it seems to me from what I gather—that you insulted 'im like a dog—told 'im right out that 'im o' him couldn't breathe the same air, walk under the same sky, an' so forth."

"What I said on that occasion was quite a private matter," said Telfare, "and, to be plain with you, I don't intend to discuss it."

"But, you see, governor"—Truitt was chewing his tobacco slowly and eying his victim like a cat watching a mouse—"you see, another feller up thar, that hadn't got a thing agin his record—a feller that never had no kin in jail, nor any hung, nor none in state politics—a feller that it on the right side all through the war—that feller hadn't satisfied. He don't feel right to set still an' let you demean a pore boy that's doin' his level best to raise his head up."

Telfare turned pale. He looked as if he were about to fall.

"You came to bring a challenge?" he gasped.

"Well, I've come to do some'n'," said Truitt earnestly. "It looks powerful like you've got to take prompt action in the matter. You've made fine speeches all over the state about the equality o' men, an' it would be a big joke on you, to have it get out that your blood was too rich to come up agin one o' the most honorable young men in the state o' Georgia, jest because his daddy went wrong."

Telfare sunk into his leather enshrouded chair. He was very nervous, and his pallor had extended even to his white hands.

"Who is the—the man that is dissatisfied?" he faltered.

"Me," said Truitt sharply.

"You?" The governor could only stare in bewilderment.

"Yes, me, Bas Truitt of the Forty-second Georgia, under Colonel H. F. Plerson. My record's all right. At least it ain't, you kin show why it ain't. Yes, I've come here fer some sort o' settlement, an' I'm goin' to have it, or I'll turn the governor o' Georgia across my knee an' spank 'im black an' blue. No dern, datted shirked skunk kin insult a brave, pure hearted friend o' mine an' leave 'im writin' under it, an' go off an' chuckle, jest because of a flimsy excuse like you put up to him. No, sree; you've got to git a move on you. What I would advise is a gentlemanly apology."

"Apology? You must be out of your mind, sir," said Telfare angrily. "I can't send an apology to that man."

"You say you can't, you pore," thundered Truitt. "Stand up! What you settin' down fer?" And Truitt actually took the governor by the ear and twisted it as he raised him, squirming like an eel, to his feet. "How do you like that, curse you?"

Telfare, beside himself with fear and excitement, tore Truitt's hand from his smarting ear and furiously rang the silver bell on his desk. The servant in the hall quickly appeared.

"Call a policeman!" Telfare panted. "There's one on the corner."

"By gum! I hadn't calculated on that move o' yore'n," said Truitt coolly. "I reckon the cop 'll slip me in jail, but I've always heard they feed purty well thar, an' I'm as hungry as a bear."

Telfare made no reply. Truitt was between him and the door or he would undoubtedly have made his escape. As it was, he only stood at his desk, white as death and quivering from head to foot.

There was a clatter of feet in the hall, and a policeman, rather slight of build and a head shorter than the mountaineer, entered hastily.

"What's the trouble, governor?" he asked.

Telfare swallowed and was about to speak when Truitt broke in. "Oh, it ain't nothin', young feller, but a little election dispute me an' Telfare had. He fell agin that bell accidentally jest now, an' that feller named A-rabbi loved he was beat assassinated 'im rye fer you. Do you reckon yore big enough to keep anybody in yore beat from bein' injured?"

"The officer looked up at the gaunt mountaineer towering over him and then at Telfare, who seemed unable to speak.

"That—that nigger said Governor Telfare wanted me," the policeman stammered.

"Well, he's got dern bad judgment of he'd want me in a time o' need. Are you a married man?"

"Yes."

"Carry any life insurance?"

"No, I don't, but what's that got to—"

"Well"—Truitt stroked his beard—"I believe I'll take pity on yore widow. I thought at fust I'd mash you 'twixt my thumb an' forefinger, but I won't. Git out o' here. I've got some'n' private to say to Telfare."

The officer, with a flushed face, looked from one to the other of the two men, his inquiring glance resting on the white, right countenance of Telfare. But the governor seemed to have actually lost his presence of mind and could only stare blankly.

"I just wanted to ask you, Telfare, how you felt about havin' the whole thing writ up in the newspapers," Truitt said in the pause. "I know mighty high ever' newspaper reporter in the state an' some adjutant states. They will print anything I give 'em. We got sorter chummy at our last reunion. Yes, they will publish my side of this, an' of course you'll have a chance to have yore say. As far as I'm concerned, I'd rally like to have it git around to all the veteran camps in the state. Most o' 'em know Bas Truitt by reputation, an' when they hear about this they will jest break their necks to vote fer you next election. You hardly git in by a squeeze last time, but they'll rush you in like the woods afore when this tale gets out."

"Governor, I'm waitin' your orders," said the policeman, who seemed to feel that a mistake had been made and that he was overhearing private matters.

"Wait in the hall," Telfare said. "I'll ring if I need you. This man's been drinkin'."

"Huh!" sneered Truitt as the door closed after the policeman. "I'm dry as a chip, an' I reckon you got some o' the best settin' round, an' yet you hadn't offered a feller a drink."

"Now, what do you want?" Telfare asked, doggedly miserable, dazed, written all over him.

"Nothin' now," answered Truitt. "I'm goin' back an' tell George Buckley that I pulled yore year for you. He's felt this thing purty bad—a proud man naturally would—but when I tell 'im what I done an' that you tuck it like a dunc at school, why, it's my opinion he'll jest feel sorry fer you. I do, I know, an' I'm free to confess I feel a little grain ashamed myself, but that will wear off, I reckon. God Almighty ot to provide a different way o' pullin' skulls down from their perch, but it seems he ain't. That's all I have to say. Good day, yore excellency."

Truitt left Telfare sitting at his desk, silently, desperately silent, and went out. Through it all the mountaineer had not removed his hat, and his chew of tobacco was still in his mouth.

Wakeful?

Sleeplessness Is a Sign of Nerve Trouble and Should Be Looked To.

There are three different manifestations of sleeplessness.

First, hardly to sleep a wink all night, second, to be awake a long time before falling asleep; third, to fall asleep soon, waking up after several hours and then find it hard to sleep again.

They mean that somewhere in the nerve fibres, somewhere in the blood vessels that carry blood to the brain, something is radically wrong, and must be righted, or the end may be worse than death.

To right it take Dr. Miles' Nervine.

Some other symptoms of nerve trouble are: Dizziness, Headache, Backache, Worry, Restlessness, Irritability, Melancholy, Lack of Ambition. They indicate diseases which may lead to Epilepsy, Pits, St. Vitus' Dance, Nervous Prostration, Paralysis, Insanity. Nothing will give such quick and lasting relief as Dr. Miles' Nervine.

"My husband had been sick for weeks, could not get up to his feet, his head ached. With all the medical help we could get he continued to grow worse. He could neither sleep or eat. Our baby girl was sent away, and all callers barred, because he could not stand a bit of talking. I read of a case of nervous prostration cured by Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. We began giving it to him, and in a few days he was on his feet, and in a few more he was as well as before. From that time he steadily improved. Nervine saved his life."

WHAT THIS MAN SAYS

Only Re-echoes the Sentiment of Thousands in Our Republic.

The Janesville reader is asked to thoroughly investigate the following: gentleman whose statement is published below will only be too pleased to answer any communication mailed to him if the writer really suffers from the annoying consequences which always attend inactive or weakened kidneys.

W. Samp, of 412 Euclid avenue, proprietors of the largest rock quarrying business in Beloit, says: "I had trouble with my kidneys for many years. It cost me most of a lame and aching back, and there were occasions when I had such severe attacks that I could not get out of the house for two or three weeks at a time. I was then practically helpless for it was painful to move. At other times I assumed a military form, being a dull achin' across my kidneys. I used medicines of different kinds but I never found anything that gave the satisfaction that Dean's Kidney Pills did. This remedy is worthy of a high recommendation and it is a pleasure for me to endorse it as doing all that is claimed for it."

A Solemn Duty.

A solemn duty which we owe society, our children and ourselves is that nothing which can be done to assist nature at that time when our wives are to become mothers should be left undone. Of all the countless details to be observed at such a time, no single one is of more importance than the bodily welfare of the expectant mother; she must not experience undue suffering through any lack of effort on our part.

MOTHER'S FRIEND

should be the recourse of all real men and women at such times; it is easily obtainable, and it is a positive crime not to procure it. Its offices are to relax the muscles and tissues intimately associated in this greatest of the Creator's phenomena, and by simple external applications a result is obtained which at the appointed time permits the mother to undergo her greatest joy with fortitude, and bring into the world a child worthy of its parents. $1.00, all druggists. PRESIDENT AT PLAY

VACATION DIVERSIONS OF THE NATION'S CHIEF MAGISTRATE.

He and His Opponent, Judge Parker, Both Devoted to Outdoor Life—The President Camps Out With His Boys and Enjoys Roughing It.

Theodore Roosevelt is a man who thoroughly enjoys life. He does not believe, with Russell Sage, in not taking vacations. He is known as the most strenuous of presidents, yet he enjoys immensely his summer rest. The energy which he puts into the discharge of his executive functions he obtains through his vigorous exercise and through being so much out of doors. Every day, year in and year out, no matter what the condition of official business or the state of the weather, he manages to obtain some air and exercise, but during the hot summer months the president plans to devote the greater portion of his time to life out of doors and to recreations which both recruit his physical energies and distract his mind from the heavy cares of his high office.

It is an interesting circumstance that the candidates of both the great parties for president this year are men who are devoted to outdoor exercise and who have been able to accomplish what they have largely because of the physical energy they have gained from constant communion with nature and use of their muscles under the open sky and in the light of the health giving sun. Judge Alton B. Parker takes his morning bath in the Hudson and his horseback ride during the summer season, and he forgets the cares of professional and public life amid the pastoral scenes of his farm at Esopus. Theodore Roosevelt, with his family of boys and girls about him at his summer home at Oyster Bay on Long Island, is also a thorough champion of life in the open. Active, agile, bubbling over with spirits like a boy out of school, always ready for a game or a horseback ride or a tramp over the hills and along the picturesque Long Island shore, the president of the United States shows that he at any rate believes in being natural and human and getting all that to be had from a healthy, active, unrestrained enjoyment of a summer's vacation.

Mrs. Roosevelt agrees with the president in these ideas. She loves to be her husband's companion and to enjoy everything that he does, horseback riding, driving, reading and study. She does not find herself troubled with ennui when the warm days of midsummer are here. She is devoting much time this summer to study of German and to botany. The president is a splendid linguist and is especially popular with the diplomatic corps because he can converse with most of its members in their native tongue. Mrs. Roosevelt hopes by next winter to be as much at ease in German as the president. She is a fine French scholar. Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt are both fond of botany, and their out of door life makes it natural for them to devote time to observation of flowers and plants. When in Washington they are accustomed to have daily strolls about the White House grounds, in the course of which they examine the shrubs and plants.

Sagamore Hill, the Roosevelt home at Oyster Bay, is conveniently located for the enjoyment of short outings. Mr. Roosevelt has been accustomed to go camping with the boys—Theodore Junior, Kermit, Archie and Quentin—at some time during every summer, and these excursions are looked forward to with great anticipations. The president is bringing his sons up to enjoy "roughing it" as well as he does himself, believing that this is productive of manliness and a good thing for both health and morals. The boys have to take things as they come and make no complaints when they go on one of these trips.

Four years ago, when Mr. Roosevelt was a candidate for vice president on the ticket with Mr. McKinley, he made a great many campaign speeches and traveled widely over the United States. It is not considered in keeping with the dignity of that high office for a candidate for the presidency who is already an incumbent of the position to travel about the country making campaign addresses. For this reason Mr. Roosevelt's summer is to be a comparatively quiet one. He will avoid the strain and fatigue of a speechmaking tour, with its incidental functions and hand-shaking episodes. It is expected that the president and his family will remain at Oyster Bay until late in September, and political delegations will not, as a rule, go to his summer home.
